

Slip and Fall Public Liability guide

If you have been injured because of someone else's fault, you may have a civil action in negligence against that person who caused the accident.

The Personal Injuries Proceedings Act 2002 (Qld) applies to slip and fall / public liability claims.

For the injured party it provides access to common law, that is, the injured person has a right to approach a law court to seek monetary compensation from the person/entity 'at fault' for the personal injury and other related losses.

As a fault based scheme it requires proof of liability, i.e. the injured party must be able to establish negligence against the person/entity they believe is at fault.

If an injury results in the loss of capacity, the injured person may have lost the ability to prepare a will or enduring power of attorney. Compensation payments may also effect the injured persons wishes in a will that had already been prepared.

We recommend that if you, or a family member have been involved in an accident, you should seek advice about how the accident might effect your estate from one of McNamara Law estate lawyers.

McNamara Law understand that the financial strains that result from personal injures can place pressure on relationships. If your relationship has deteriorated because of an injury, you should seek advice from one of McNamara Law compensation lawyers

Can you make a claim

Public liability covers many different circumstances. Some of these include:-

- Falls down steps
- Injuries in rental properties
- Accidents at a work site if you are a contractor
- Dog attacks
- Schoolyard and playground accidents
- Sporting accidents if the grounds are poorly maintained
- Slips and falls in shopping centres and supermarkets
- Police brutality and other assaults
- Accidents on private or public property
- Injuries by defective products.

It is also critical that you consider if at the time of the accident you:

- a. were working; or
- b. travelling to or from work; or
- c. have, or have had a workers' compensation claim for this injury

In any of these cases you may have other rights which may be lost if you do not take steps within extremely short time limits.

In some cases you may be able to apply for income protection or Total and Permanent Disability (TPD) Insurance, workers compensation benefits, or make a claim for a motor vehicle accident.

What can you claim for

If you settle your claim or a Court makes an award in your favour the money you receive is referred to as “damages”.

Damages are broken down into different categories:-

1. General Damages (pain and suffering)
2. Special Damages (expenses)
3. Past Economic Loss (lost wages)
4. Future Economic Loss (loss of future earning capacity)
5. Future Special Damages

You should keep a record of all the expense you have incurred because of the injury; ie medication, Doctor bills, kilometers travelled to Doctor appointments, expenses of any modifications to the home and time off work are just some of the examples of the type of expense you should record. You may receive your damages as a single payment (after deduction of the refunds outlined above and your legal fees and outlays). This is usually referred to as a lump sum settlement. It is by far the most common way to receive your damages.

Alternatively, you may choose to negotiate a structured settlement. A structured settlement occurs where there is an agreement providing for the payment of all or part of your damages in the form of periodic payments funded by an annuity or other agreed means. A structured settlement may be possible but you are strongly advised to obtain independent financial advice about the effect of a structured settlement as compared to the receipt of lump sum damages.

How do you claim

The first step in bringing your claim is to issue the Notice of Claim Form.

It is very important that all details on this form are correct. You must list all injuries in your Notice of Claim Form and subsequent documents in order for you to be fully compensated for your loss and damage

This form needs to be sent to the Respondent to your claim within nine months of the injury occurring, or within one month after instructing a solicitor to act on your behalf. If this is not done you will need to provide an explanation for the delay.

How you fill out the form can significantly affect both the amount of compensation you receive and the way the Respondent treats you.

McNamara Law can assist you in completing the Notice of Claim Form.

What happens after you lodge a claim

Once you serve your Notice of Claim form, your claim will have formally begun.

The Respondent will then have one month to respond to tell you whether

- It agrees that it is a proper respondent to the claim; and
- It agrees that the Notice of Claim Form contains all of the required information.

The Respondent will then have one month to respond to tell you whether

- Use the authority that you sign (as part of the Notice of Claim Form) to obtain documents from your current and past doctors, the hospital that you attended for treatment, government agencies including the Police and Centrelink and your current and past employers. If you indicated in the Notice of Claim Form that you have had previous significant injuries, the insurer is also entitled to obtain documents relating to those injuries;
- Appoint investigators to investigate the factual basis of your claim. These investigators might take statements from witnesses or conduct video surveillance of you. Surveillance can extend to internet and social media checks. Please advise if you have been involved in any prior proceedings and also if you are active on any forms of social media like Facebook as surveillance inconsistent with your claim may affect claim outcome;
- Require you to provide information regarding the circumstances of the accident and anything to do with the quantum of your loss and damage. The insurer can require you to provide this information in a statutory declaration whereby you swear that the information contained in that declaration is correct;
- Require you to undergo independent medical examinations.

Not all of these things will apply to your claim. McNamara Law can provide you with advice and assistance in relation to any issues that do arise.

How long will it take

The following is a basic timeline of the likely progress of your claim. This is a guide only.

STEP	TIME
Serve Part 1 Notice of Claim Form	1 month from date of first instructing a Solicitor to act for you, or 9 months after your injury
Respondent confirms that it is a proper respondent and confirms compliance of claim form	1 month after step 1
Serve Part 2 Notice of Claim	2 months after step 2
Respondent's liability response	6 months after step 2
Prepare Statement of Loss and Damage	9 - 12 months after step 1
Medical examinations	6 - 12 months after step 1
Respondent's medical examinations	6 - 12 months after step 1
Compulsory conference	12 - 18 months after step 1
Begin court proceedings if necessary	Within 60 days after step 8

What happens if the Insurer denies fault

To succeed in a claim, you must show that the accident and the injuries you sustained were caused by another other persons negligence. That is, you suffered injury as a result of that person breaching their duty of care towards you.

This means collecting evidence. To start with photographs should be taken of the site where the injury occurred.

Next, statements should be taken from anyone that witnessed the injury, including the injured person preparing a statement them self. Some injury claims could take years to resolve, so a simultaneous record of what the injured person recalls of the accident is very important. These documents will be useful at some time down the track to prove the claim.

Sometimes this may not be enough to convince the Respondent that they are at fault. McNamara Law can investigate fault for you.

What are the time limits

There are timeframes for lodgment of your Notice of Claim under the legislation and there are two parts to your Notice of Claim.

A Part 1 Notice of Claim must be given to the party you believe is at fault (Respondent) within the period ending on the earlier of:

- a. nine months after the incident or, if no immediate symptoms, when first appearance of symptoms become apparent; or
- b. one month after instructing a solicitor to act.

Your claim could be rejected if you lodge outside the timeframes. Early lodgment of your claim will assist in early access to treatment and rehabilitation if required. Part 2 of your Notice of Claim must be given to the person/entity to whom your Part 1 was given within two (2) months from when notification or presumption of compliance with the relevant sections of the Act is given.

Regardless of what steps are taken in the meantime, it is essential that court proceedings are started within three years of you injury. In the event that you decide to engage McNamara Law or a different firm of solicitors to act for you, we strongly recommend that you urgently seek their advice on applicable limitation dates.

Generally speaking after this date you will not be able to bring an action for damages in relation to this accident, however, you should take legal advice in this regard.

Is there anything else you should know?

If your injuries have any impact on or are affected by your employment (such as bullying, demotion or dismissal), you may also wish to seek advice on whether these circumstances give rise to other rights. Strict time limits may apply and you should therefore raise any concerns and seek advice as soon as possible.

After you serve your claim the Respondent has the right to appoint investigators to investigate the factual basis of your claim. These investigators might take statements from witnesses or conduct video surveillance of you. Surveillance can extend to internet and social media checks. It has become common for Respondents to perform full reviews of a claimant's social media profile, whether it be Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, LinkedIn, Snapchat, YouTube or any other websites.

We strongly advise that you bear in mind that the Respondent to your claim may investigate your social media profiles before posting comments, pictures or videos. Even if your profile is closed to the public, the Respondent may obtain an Order from the Court for you to disclose the entire content of your social media profile.
